

Big corporations are solely out to make money and, as we've all seen quite recently, make money any way they can--at the expense of the public, stock holders, and investors. More importantly, when the media is owned by big business for all practical purposes it's owned by the government since the owners will do whatever it takes to get political favors. This is already the case now but will become even worse should ownership rules be relaxed.